Keen skier and inventor of Snowmule, Kevin Stevens, developed the products as a result of personal experience.

"Having skied for many years I was amazed at how different (and difficult!) the experience was the very first time I took my children to the Alps. They seemed to find every area of flat piste for miles around, so I was constantly pulling or pushing them on their skis, or carrying their skis and equipment. I seemed to spend hours walking along with three pairs of skis in my hands, or shuffling along on my own skis while dragging one or more children with my poles."

"Having searched high and low for a solution I was told by every ski shop that there was none! So, after years of testing and development Snowmule was born."
